Summary

Bryan officially began his construction career after 8 years of active duty in the United States Marine Corps. However, while in his youth he worked laboring and assisting with framing, roofing, and drywall to build a stable foundation of hands on construction skills. After his active service, Bryan went to welding school in Baltimore, MD and began working in industrial maintenance. He then took a job with a large water treatment company in PA., learning plumbing and basic electrical work. Bryan then transitioned back into welding and metal fabrication working out of a local sheet metal union hall. In 2010 Bryan and relocated his family to Florida, where he began working as an Assistant Superintendent for a national construction management company. 2014 Bryan was promoted to Project Superintendent, and since has held roles of Lead Superintendent, Warranty/ QAQC Manager, and Preconstruction Manager. Bryan's problem-solving skills, judgement, and critical thinking allow him to see problems from various sides to help resolve jobsite issues. Bryan's personal dedication to operational success drives him to turn over the best product possible for the client.
